8 WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
9 AT SEATTLE

10 MICHAEL OLIVER, et al.,

11 Plaintiffs,

12 v.

13 ALCOA, INC.,

14 Defendant.

CASE NO. C16-0741JLR

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT AND DENYING PLAINTIFFS'
MOTION FOR
RECONSIDERATION AND
SUMMARY JUDGMENT

15 I. INTRODUCTION

16 Before the court are three motions: (1) Defendant Alcoa, Inc.'s ("Alcoa") motion 17 for summary judgment (Alcoa Mot. (Dkt. # 32)); (2) Plaintiffs Michael Oliver and Kris 18 Oliver's (collectively, "the Olivers") motion for reconsideration of the court's September 19 12, 2016, order and for summary judgment (Olivers Mot. (Dkt. # 40); see also 9/12/16 20 Order (Dkt. # 29)); and (3) Alcoa's motion to stay the proceedings (MTS (Dkt. # 47)).
21 The court has considered the motions, the parties' submissions filed in support of and 22 opposition to the motions, the relevant portions of the record, and the applicable law.

1 Being fully advised,¹ the court GRANTS Alcoa's motion for summary judgment, 2 DENIES the Oliver's motion, and DENIES Alcoa's motion to stay as moot.

3 II. BACKGROUND

4 The suit arises out of a planned curtailment of the workforce at Alcoa's Intalco 5 Works aluminum smelter in Ferndale, Washington, in November 2015. (Hughes Decl.
6 (Dkt. # 19) ¶ 5.) On December 18, 2015, in preparation for the planned layoffs at the 7 Ferndale plant, Mr. Oliver executed two documents, titled "Memo[random]" and 8 "Separation Agreement." (FAC Ex. A (Dkt. # 8-1) at 2-3 (attaching Memorandum), 4-5 9 (attaching Separation Agreement).) The Memorandum states that Mr. Oliver's "last day 10 of employment will be 3/31/2016" and that he "will receive severance in accordance with 11 the Company's Severance Pay Plan" in the amount of $80,292.00. (Id. Ex. A at 2.) The 12 Memorandum states that "[t]o receive an enhanced separation pay package, you must 13 sign the attached Separation Agreement releasing the Company from future claims."
14 (Id.)

15 The Separation Agreement states that Mr. Oliver will receive benefits "under the 16 Plan" or as "provided in the Plan, which are intended to provide an economic bridge 17 during possible unemployment and not as compensation for services previously 18 rendered." (Id. at 4-5.) The Separation Agreement also states that Mr. Oliver 19 "acknowledge[s] . . . receiv[ing] a summary of Plan provisions describing the eligibility

21 ¹ No party has requested oral argument on any of the pending motions, and the court does 22 not consider oral argument necessary for its determination of any of the motions. See Local Rules W.D. Wash. LCR 7(b)(4).

1 requirements for benefits under the Plan” (Id. at 5.) The Separation Agreement 2 encourages the employee to discuss the agreement with a private attorney,² and contains 3 an acknowledgement that the employee had the opportunity to seek the advice of counsel 4 before signing it. (Id.)

5 In a previous order,³ the court held that “the use of the terms ‘in accordance with 6 [the Company’s Severance Pay Plan]’ in the Memorandum . . . clearly and unequivocally 7 incorporates ‘the Company’s Severance Pay Plan’ into the Memorandum,” and the “use 8 of the terms ‘provided in the Plan’ in the Separation Agreement clearly and 9 unequivocally incorporates the ‘Plan’ into the Separation Agreement.” (9/12/16 Order at 10 18; see also id. at 19 (“[T]he Memorandum unambiguously does not stand alone, but 11 rather incorporates by reference ‘the Company’s Severance Pay Plan’ or the ‘Plan.’”)).⁴
12 Indeed, the court held that “ignoring the Memorandum’s reference to ‘the Company’s 13 Severance Pay Plan’ or the Separation Agreement’s reference to the ‘Plan’ would 14 improperly render these terms superfluous under Washington law. (Id. at 19.) The court,

16 ² The Separation Agreement states: “I encourages me to discuss understand that the 17 Company this Separation Agreement with my private attorney before signing it by me.” (FAC 18 Ex. A at 4.) There are obvious typographical errors in this sentence. The Separation Agreement 19 also states: “I acknowledge . . . that I have had an opportunity to seek counsel with an attorney 20 and have had sufficient time to read the Separation Agreement and make a decision regarding 21 acceptance of its terms.” (Id. at 5 (capitalization omitted).)

22 ³ On September 12, 2016, the court denied Alcoa’s motions to dismiss the Olivers’ claims and the Olivers’ first motion for summary judgment. (See 9/12/16 Order (Dkt # 29); see also 1st MTD (Dkt. # 5); 2d MTD (Dkt. # 14); 1st SJ Mot. (Dkt. # 9).)

⁴ The court further held that the Memorandum and Separation Agreement are “unequivocally link[ed] . . . since the latter is ‘attached’ to the former and incorporates the Separation Agreement into the Memorandum by reference.” (9/12/16 Order at 18-19 n.7.)

1 | however, did not determine at that time to which specific document these terms referred.
2 | (See id. at 20-25.) Thus, the identity of the document that the parties “clearly and 3 | unequivocally” incorporated by reference into their agreement is a primary focus of the 4 | parties’ present motions. (See Olivers Mot. at 12-14; Alcoa Mot. at 4-5.)

5 | Throughout this litigation, Alcoa has consistently argued that the terms “the
6 | Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the “Plan” in the Memorandum and Separation
7 | Agreement refer to Alcoa’s Involuntary Separation Plan (“ISP”). (Alcoa Mot. at 3;
8 | 9/12/16 Order at 23 (indicating that Alcoa’s proffered interpretation of the terms
9 | “Company’s Severance Plan” and the “Plan” as referring to the ISP is reasonable);
10 | Furnas Decl. (Dkt. # 6) ¶¶ 3-4, Ex. A (attaching copy of ISP).) The ISP states that it 11 | “provides a lump-sum cash benefit in the event of a permanent separation from 12 | employment.” (Furnas Decl. ¶¶ 3-4, Ex. A at 6.) The ISP also states that “[t]o receive 13 | ISP benefits, you must incur a permanent separation of employment and meet the 14 | conditions for . . . benefits.” (Id.; see also id. Ex. A at 7 (“To receive ISP benefits, you
15 | must incur a permanent separation . . .”).) The ISP further defines a “permanent 16 | separation” as requiring “the termination of employment,” and expressly provides that 17 | “[i]n no event does a permanent separation from employment occur if the employee is 18 | offered suitable employment by Alcoa, a subsidiary, or a successor employer.” (Id. Ex.
19 | A at 10.)

20 | It is undisputed that Alcoa emailed a copy of the ISP to Mr. Oliver in August
21 | 2012. (Gilmore Decl. (Dkt. # 34) ¶¶ 3-5, Exs. A-B).) The email described and provided

22 | //

1 a link to a copy of the ISP on the Internet. (Id. ¶ 5, Ex. B.) The email also advised Mr.
2 Oliver to retain a copy of the email for future reference. (Id.) Although Mr. Oliver does 3 not recall this email, he does not dispute that he received it. (Hobbs Decl. (Dkt. # 44) ¶ 2, 4 Ex. A (“Oliver Dep.”) at 53:20-24.)

5 The Olivers maintain that the ISP is not incorporated into the Memorandum and 6 Separation Agreement. (See Olivers Mot. at 7.) Mr. Oliver testifies that, before he 7 signed the Memorandum and Separation Agreement, he asked Ms. Sandra Hughes, 8 Alcoa’s Intalco Works Human Resources Manager, if there were any other documents 9 that he needed to review to understand how the Separation Agreement would work. (3d 10 Oliver Decl. (Dkt. # 36) ¶ 2.) Ms. Hughes recalls that Mr. Oliver was confused by the 11 page numbering, which indicated that the agreement contained 86 pages due to the use of 12 a mail merge. (Hughes Dep. (Dkt. # 41-2) at 61:15-25, 62:1-4.) Mr. Oliver was 13 concerned that he was missing pages from the Memorandum and Separation Agreement.
14 (1st Oliver Decl. (Dkt. # 10) ¶ 5 “[T]he bottom of the Memorandum stated that it was 15 pages 1 and 2 of 86 and I asked Ms. Hughes about the additional 84 pages that appeared 16 missing.”.) Ms. Hughes testified that she reassured Mr. Oliver that there were “no 17 missing pages from his packet.” (Hughes Dep. at 62:1-9; see also 1st Oliver Dep. ¶ 5 18 (“Ms. Hughes told me that she had printed off all of the employees’ separation 19 agreements as a batch and that the other employees’ offers were contained in the 20 remaining 84 pages.”.) She also told Mr. Oliver that “[a]ll the information for the 21 agreement is included” in the documents he received. (Hughes Dep. at 63:4-22; see also

1 3d Oliver Decl. ¶ 2 (“[Ms. Hughes] assured me that there was nothing else to review and 2 no other relevant documents”).)

3 Although Ms. Hughes testified that the term “the Company Severance Pay Plan”
4 referred to the ISP (id. at 56:3-4, 56:11-18, 59:2-6), she also acknowledged that she did 5 not explain this to Mr. Oliver, that an employee would not know the meaning of the 6 term—“the Company Severance Pay Plan”—from simply reading the Memorandum, and 7 that she has never included a copy of the ISP as a part of the separation packets she 8 distributed to Alcoa’s employees (id. at 54:22-55:3, 59:7-20). She also knows of no 9 Alcoa document that defines either “the Company Severance Pay Plan” or the “Plan” as 10 the ISP. (Id. at 57:15-23.)

11 In his deposition, Mr. Oliver testifies that although he read the phrases “the 12 Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the “Plan” in the Memorandum and Separation
13 Agreement, and although he did not understand what these terms meant, he did not ask 14 anyone at Alcoa to what these terms referred. (Oliver Dep. at 30:13-6.) Instead, Mr.
15 Oliver declares that, based on Ms. Hughes’s statements to him, he “felt assured that [he] 16 had all the documents and relevant information, and that ‘the Company’s Severance Pay 17 Plan’ and ‘the Plan’ must be the legal terms for the documents he already had, meaning 18 the Memorandum and Separation Agreement together with the Older Workers Benefits 19 Protection Act Notice to Employees.” (3d Oliver Decl. ¶ 2; see also Oliver Dep. at 20 32:8-13 (“I thought that those references were to the five pages that I had received. I 21 specifically asked [Ms. Hughes] if there was any other documents related to this

1 document that I should review or need to review to better understand this document. And 2 she said there were none.”.)

3 The only other Alcoa employee who spoke to Mr. Oliver about the Memorandum 4 and Separation Agreement was Jair Furnas. (See Oliver’s Mot. at 6 (citing Furnas Dep.
5 (Dkt. # 41-3)).) Mr. Furnas did not discuss the terms of the Memorandum and Separation 6 Agreement but rather reviewed the severance payment amount with Mr. Oliver. (Furnas 7 Dep. at 66:23-68:6.) When Mr. Furnas reviewed the amount of Mr. Oliver’s anticipated 8 severance pay, he used the ISP to make the calculation. (See id.) Mr. Furnas did not give 9 a copy of the ISP to Mr. Oliver because Mr. Oliver did not ask for one (id. at 10 70:24-71:12), and like Ms. Hughes, Mr. Furnas is unaware of any Alcoa document that 11 defines “the Company Severance Pay Plan” or the “Plan” as the ISP (id. at 75:21-76:8).
12 Mr. Furnas did not explain to Mr. Oliver that Mr. Oliver’s severance payment could be 13 revoked or rescinded if the curtailment did not occur (id. at 71:13-72:2) because Mr.
14 Furnas believes that 15 . . . it’s reasonable to assume that if there’s no curtailment, no severance.

16 You only get severance if you get severed. If you don’t get severed, you 17 don’t get severance. And [he] never had anyone specifically ask . . . a question that would lead [him] to think they didn’t understand that.

18 (Id. at 72:8-13.) Indeed, during his deposition, Mr. Oliver acknowledged that voluntary 19 severance packages are benefits that employees who are severed from their employment 20 receive. (Oliver Dep. at 22:14-18.)⁵

21 _____
22 ⁵ Mr. Oliver’s deposition testimony is as follows:

1 After a favorable improvement in market conditions, Alcoa cancelled its planned 2 curtailment at the Intalco Works plant, and more than 400 employees retained their jobs.
3 (See Hughes Decl. ¶ 11.) A few days later, on January 21, 2016, Mr. Furnas announced 4 in an email that all “ISP/Severance offers are rescinded.” (1st Oliver Decl. (Dkt # 10) ¶ 5 11, Ex. C.) Alcoa cancelled the anticipated severance payments to the salaried 6 employees who had been scheduled to be severed but ultimately continued their 7 employment, including Mr. Oliver. (See Hughes Decl. ¶ 13.) Mr. Oliver did not suffer a 8 separation from his employment at Alcoa, but rather continued to work at the plant after 9 his previously scheduled separation date of March 31, 2016. (See id. ¶ 11.) Mr. Oliver’s 10 pay, position, job duties, and all other terms of his employment at Alcoa remained the 11 same. (Id.) Ultimately, Mr. Oliver voluntarily retired on May 31, 2016. (Oliver Dep. at 12 46:9-21.) At the time he retired, Alcoa did not eliminate Mr. Oliver’s position. (Id. at 13 46:19-24.)

14 On February 4, 2016, Mr. Oliver sent an email to both Ms. Hughes and Mr. Furnas 15 stating that “[n]othing in [Alcoa’s Separation Agreement] allows Alcoa to rescind its 16 offer” of an $80,292.00 severance payment to him. (1st Oliver Decl. ¶ 11, Ex. D.) He 17 further demanded “confirmation in writing by Monday 2.15.16 that [Alcoa] will abide by 18 [the] written agreement.” (Id.) On February 8, 2016, Ms. Hughes sent an email in 19

20 Q: . . . Voluntary severance packages . . . are benefits that employees who are severed from their employment receive, is that correct?

21 A: Yes.

22 (Oliver Dep. at 22:14-18.)

1 response stating that the “receipt of . . . ISP . . . benefits is based on the occurrence of an 2 involuntary separation” and that “[d]ue to continued operations, the Company w[ould]
3 not be initiating [his] separation on March 31.” (Id. ¶ 12, Ex. D.)

4 On April 20, 2016, the Olivers filed a complaint in Whatcom County Superior 5 Court against Alcoa alleging claims for declaratory relief, specific performance, and 6 breach of contract. (Compl. (Dkt. # 1-1).) On May 23, 2016, Alcoa removed the 7 Olivers’ complaint to this court. (Notice of Removal (Dkt. # 1).) On June 20, 2016, the 8 Olivers filed an amended complaint. (FAC (Dkt. # 8).) The Olivers’ amended complaint 9 is identical to their original complaint except that the amended complaint adds a claim for 10 willful withholding of wages under RCW 49.52.050 and RCW 49.52.070. (Compare 11 Compl., with FAC.)

12 On May 31, 2016, Alcoa filed a motion to dismiss the Olivers’ complaint. (1st 13 MTD.) Alcoa argued that the terms “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the “Plan” 14 in the Memorandum and Separation Agreement referred to the ISP, and the ISP states in 15 numerous places that employees are eligible to receive severance payments only if their 16 employment is severed. (Id. at 2-3.) After the Olivers amended their complaint, Alcoa 17 filed a second motion to dismiss the Olivers’ added claim for willful withholding of 18 wages. (See 2d MTD.) The Olivers cross moved for summary judgment. (See 1st SJ 19 Mot.) In their motion, the Olivers argued that the ISP is not part of Mr. Oliver’s contract 20 with Alcoa and that Mr. Oliver is entitled to receive the $80,292.00 severance payment 21 despite his continued employment with Alcoa. (See generally id.) As discussed above, 22 although the court denied both motions, the court ruled that the contract between Alcoa

1 and Mr. Oliver does not stand alone, but rather incorporates by reference “the Company’s 2 Severance Pay Plan” or the “Plan” into the agreement. (See 9/12/16 Order at 17-19.)

3 On October 7, 2015, Alcoa filed a motion asking the court to grant it summary 4 judgment by ruling that (1) the terms “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the 5 “Plan” refer to and incorporate the ISP into the Memorandum and Separation Agreement, 6 and (2) the ISP precludes the payment of severance benefits to Mr. Oliver. (See 7 generally Alcoa Mot.) Before the court could rule on Alcoa’s motion, however, the 8 Olivers filed a motion (1) for relief under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b) and 9 Local Civil Rule 7(h) from the court’s first order denying Alcoa’s motions to dismiss and 10 the Olivers’ first motion for summary judgment and (2) for the entry of summary 11 judgment in their favor that the terms “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the 12 “Plan” in the Memorandum and Separation Agreement do not refer to the ISP, but rather 13 refer back to the Memorandum and Separation Agreement themselves. (See Olivers 14 Mot.) The court entered an order directing the Clerk to renote Alcoa’s motion for the 15 same day as the Olivers’ motion. (2/21/17 Order (Dkt. # 42) at 2 (citing Local Rules 16 W.D. Wash. LCR 7(k)).) The court now considers these motions.

17 III. ANALYSIS

18 A. The Olivers’ Request for Reconsideration of the Court’s Prior Rulings

19 Before addressing Alcoa’s and the Olivers’ cross motions for summary judgment, 20 the court examines the Olivers’ request under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b) and 21 Local Civil Rule 7(h) for reconsideration of the court’s prior ruling in this case. (See

1 Olivers Mot. at 7-12); Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b); Local Rules W.D. Wash. LCR 7(h). As 2 discussed below, the court denies the Olivers' request for reconsideration.

3 1. Local Civil Rule 7(h)

4 The Olivers purport to bring their motion for reconsideration under Local Civil 5 Rule 7(h). (See Olivers Mot. at 1 (citing Local Rules W.D. Wash. LCR 7(h).) Local 6 Civil Rule 7(h) provides that motions for reconsideration "are disfavored" and "shall be 7 filed within fourteen days after the order to which it relates is filed." Local Rules W.D.
8 Wash. LCR 7(h)(1), (2). The court filed the order to which the Olivers' motion relates on 9 September 12, 2016. (See 9/12/16 Order.) The Olivers filed their motion for 10 reconsideration on February 16, 2017—more than five months after the court issued its 11 ruling. (See Olivers Mot.) Thus, the Olivers' motion for reconsideration is untimely 12 under the court's Local Rules.

13 2. Rule 60(b)

14 The Olivers also purport to bring their motion for reconsideration under Rule 15 60(b). (See Olivers Mot. at 1 (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)).) Rule 60(b) provides that 16 "[o]n motion, the court may relieve a party or its legal representative from a final 17 judgment, order, or proceeding" for various specified reasons. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b). As 18 the requirement of a "final judgment, order, or proceeding" implies, a party may not 19 ordinarily bring a motion under Rule 60(b) "unless the order to be reconsidered is a final 20 ruling from which an appeal could have been taken." United States v. Iron Mountain 21 Mines, Inc., 812 F. Supp. 1528, 1555 (E.D. Cal. 1992). An order denying summary 22 judgment is not a final appealable order within the scope of Rule 60(b). Iron Mountain,

1 812 F. Supp. at 1556; see also McCarthy v. Mayo, 827 F.2d 1310, 1318 (9th Cir. 1987)
2 (stating that Rule 60(b) “cannot be used as a substitute for an appeal” where a party’s 3 argument “is nothing more than dissatisfaction with a ruling of the court.”). Thus, Rule 4 60(b) is not a proper procedural vehicle for the Oliver’s motion for reconsideration.

5 3. The Court’s Plenary Power to Reconsider Prior Rulings

6 Although the Oliver’s may not bring their motion for reconsideration under either 7 Local Civil Rule 7(h) or Rule 60(b), notwithstanding either rule, the court “retains 8 plenary power to afford relief from interlocutory orders and judgments ‘as justice 9 requires.’” See Iron Mountain, 812 F. Supp. at 1555; see also United States v. Jerry, 487 10 F.2d 600, 605 (3d Cir. 1973) (recognizing that “so long as the district court has 11 jurisdiction over the case, it possesses inherent power over interlocutory orders, and can 12 reconsider them when it is consonant with justice to do so”). Accordingly, pursuant to its 13 plenary power, the court will analyze whether justice requires the court to reconsider its 14 September 12, 2016, ruling as the Oliver’s request.

15 4. The Court’s September 12, 2016, Ruling

16 In their first motion for summary judgment, the Oliver’s argued that: (1) the ISP is 17 not a part of the Memorandum and Separation Agreement, (2) the Memorandum and 18 Separation Agreement are the sole documents governing the agreement between Mr.
19 Oliver and Alcoa, (3) the Memorandum and Separation Agreement, standing alone, are 20 unambiguous, and (4) Alcoa breached the terms of these documents. (See 9/12/16 Order 21 at 15, 17.) The court denied the Oliver’s motion in total. (See id. at 25.) In doing so, the 22 court rejected the Oliver’s argument that the Memorandum and Separation Agreement

1 are the sole documents governing the agreement between Mr. Oliver and Alcoa. (Id. at 2 18.) Instead, the court held that (1) “the use of the terms ‘in accordance with [the 3 Company’s Severance Pay Plan]’ in the Memorandum . . . clearly and unequivocally 4 incorporates ‘the Company’s Severance Pay Plan’ into the Memorandum” and (2) the 5 “use of the terms ‘provided in the Plan’ in the Separation Agreement clearly and 6 unequivocally incorporates the ‘Plan’ into the Separation Agreement.” (Id. (citing W.
7 Wash. Corp. of Seventh-Day Adventists v. Ferrellgas, Inc., 7 P.3d 861, 865 (Wash. Ct.
8 App. 2000)).) The court further stated that (1) Alcoa offered a reasonable interpretation 9 of these terms as referring to the ISP (see id. at 23), (2) the Olivers, on the other hand, 10 failed to “suggest an alternative meaning for these same terms” (id.), and (3) the court 11 was “unwilling to ascribe no meaning to these terms where a reasonable one [wa]s 12 offered” (id.).

13 However, the court expressly declined to rule on the record before it at that time 14 that the terms “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” or the “Plan” refer to the ISP. (Id. at 15 25 (“[T]he court concludes that there are material issues of fact concerning whether the 16 ISP was incorporated into the Memorandum and Separation Agreement through use of 17 the terms “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the “Plan. Accordingly, the court 18 denies the Olivers’ motion for summary judgment on this issue.”).) Indeed, the court 19 held it was “constrained from entering summary judgment on this issue in favor of Alcoa 20 because Alcoa did not move for summary judgment, expressly asked the court not to 21 convert its motions to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment, and stated that it 22 intended to move for summary judgment at an appropriate time in the future.” (Id. at 25

1 n.10.) The court further stated that the case was “in an early procedural posture” and thus 2 granting summary judgment at that time to any party might be premature. (Id. (citing 3 Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d)).)

4 5. The Olivers’ Motion for Reconsideration

5 Despite the court’s unequivocal statement in its September 12, 2016, order that it 6 was not so ruling (id.), the Olivers nevertheless presently request that the court 7 “reconsider its earlier ruling that the ISP was incorporated by reference into the 8 Memorandum and Separation Agreement” (Olivers Mot. at 8; see also id. (referring to 9 “the issue of whether the Memorandum and Separation Agreement incorporated by 10 reference the ISP”); id. at 11 (referring to “a reversal of the Court’s previous holding that 11 the ISP was incorporated into the Memorandum and Separation Agreement”)). Thus, the 12 Olivers request reconsideration of a ruling that the court has not yet made. (See generally 13 9/12/16 Order.) The court cannot reconsider a nonexistent ruling.

14 If, on the other hand, the Olivers seek reconsideration of the court’s ruling that 15 “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” is incorporated by reference into the parties’ 16 agreement and that therefore the Memorandum and Separation Agreement are not the 17 sole documents that govern the parties’ contract (Olivers Mot. at 1; see also Olivers 18 Reply (Dkt. # 45) at 1), the court declines to do so. To begin, as the court has previously 19 held, the plain language of the contract “clearly,” “unequivocally,” and “unambiguously” 20 incorporates another document by reference. (9/12/16 Order at 18-19 (citing Ferrellgas, 21 7 P.3d at 865).) Nevertheless, the Olivers point to Mr. Oliver’s reliance on his 22 conversation with Ms. Hughes in which she told him that “[a]ll the information for the

1 agreement is included” in the documents he received (see Hughes Dep. at 63:4-22; see 2 also 3d Oliver Decl. ¶ 2) and other extrinsic evidence to argue that the Memorandum and 3 Separation Agreement stand alone (see Oliver Mot. at 8-9). Because the court can readily 4 ascertain the parties’ intent to incorporate another document by reference to the words
5 used in the Memorandum and Separation Agreement, the extrinsic evidence the Olivers 6 offer to suggest a subjective contrary intent is irrelevant, and the court may not consider 7 it.⁶ See Hearst Commc’ns, Inc. v. Seattle Times Co., 115 P.3d 262, 267 (Wash. 2005)
8 (“[T]he subjective intent of the parties is generally irrelevant if the intent can be 9 determined from the actual words used.”); Martin v. Smith, 368 P.3d 227, 230 (Wash. Ct.
10 App. 2016) (“The parties’ subjective intent is irrelevant if the [the court] can ascertain 11 their intent from the words in the agreement.”); William G. Hulbert, Jr. & Clare 12 Mumford Hulbert Revocable Living Trust v. Port of Everett, 245 P.3d 779, 784 (Wash.
13 Ct. App. 2011) (“Extrinsic evidence may not, however, be used to show an intention

15 ⁶ In Hearst Communications, Inc. v. Seattle Times Co., 115 P.3d 262, 266-67 (Wash.
16 2005), the Washington Supreme Court clarified confusion generated by its earlier decision in 17 Berg v. Hudesman, 801 P.2d 222, 229-30 (Wash. 1990), in which the Court had adopted the 18 “context rule” of contract interpretation. The Court explained that “Washington continues to 19 follow the objective manifestation theory of contracts.” Hearst Commc’ns, 115 P.3d at 267.
20 Although a party may offer extrinsic evidence of the context surrounding an instrument’s 21 execution, “extrinsic evidence is relevant only to determine the meaning of specific words and 22 terms, not to show an intention independent of the instrument or to vary, contradict or modify the written word.” Oliver v. Flow Int’l Corp., 155 P.3d 140, 143 (Wash. Ct. App. 2006). Thus, the court does not consider the Olivers’ proffered extrinsic evidence because they offer the evidence to contradict the written words of the Memorandum and Separation Agreement, which unequivocally incorporate by reference “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” into the parties’ contract. Because these terms are unambiguous, summary judgment on this issue is appropriate.
See Dice v. City of Montesano, 128 P.3d 1253, 1257 (Wash. Ct. App. 2006) (“Interpretation of an unambiguous contract is a question of law, thus summary judgment is appropriate.”); see infra § III.B.1.

1 independent of the instrument or to vary, contradict or modify the written word.”(internal 2 quotation marks omitted)); In re Mastro, No. BAP WW-10-1142-MKHJU, 2011 WL
3 3300140, at *5 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. May 10, 2011) (citing Hearst Commc’ns, 115 P.3d at 270 4 & n.14) (stating that, under Hearst, the court may not consider extrinsic evidence if the 5 contract language is not reasonably susceptible to the meaning that the proffering party 6 attempts to attribute to it).

7 Indeed, the Olivers cite a case, U.S. Life Credit Insurance Co. v. Williams, 919
8 P.2d 594 (Wash. 1996), in which the court rejected a party’s attempt to use extrinsic
9 evidence under factual circumstances similar to the Olivers’ attempt here. (See Oliver 10 Mot. at 9 (citing Williams).) In Williams, extrinsic evidence showed that a representative 11 of an insurance company advised the insured that marking the insurance contract in a 12 certain way upon signing meant that the insurance coverage at issue would be extended to 13 both the insured and his wife. Williams, 919 P.2d at 596. The court held that such 14 extrinsic evidence could not be relied upon to modify the plain language of the insurance 15 contract that, by its terms, applied only to the husband. Id. at 597 (“That is so because 16 this evidence is contrary to other clear and unambiguous language in the insurance 17 certificate to the effect that disability insurance coverage was provided only to [the 18 husband]”). Similarly, the Olivers attempt to submit statements by Alcoa’s 19 representatives to Mr. Oliver and other extrinsic evidence in an effort to contradict the 20 plain language of the Memorandum and Separation Agreement. The Olivers’ attempt to 21 vary the contract’s terms fails for the same reasons as those expressed by the court in 22 Williams.

1 Finally, the Olivers' reliance on Section 201 of the Restatement (Second) of 2 Contracts is misplaced. (See Olivers Mot. at 10-11 (citing Restatement (Second) of 3 Contracts §§ 201(2)(a), (b) (1981)). The Olivers argue that pursuant to this provision of 4 the Restatement, Mr. Oliver's interpretation of the terms "the Company's Severance Pay 5 Plan" and the "Plan" should prevail because he had no reason to know that Alcoa was 6 interpreting these terms to mean the ISP, whereas Ms. Hughes and Mr. Furnas knew 7 about the ISP. (Id. at 11.) However, Section 201 "does not operate independently of the 8 words in the Agreement," but "gives effect to one party's understanding only if the words 9 of the agreement can be read to embrace that party's understanding." Arizona v. Tohono 10 O'odham Nation, 944 F. Supp. 2d 748, 773 (D. Ariz. 2013), aff'd, 818 F.3d 549 (9th Cir.
11 2016).⁷ Section 201 might come into play if the Olivers offered a competing, reasonable 12 interpretation of the terms at issue. They have not done so.

13 Indeed, the court cannot read the words of the Memorandum and Separation 14 Agreement to embrace the Olivers' understanding. Adopting the Olivers' interpretation 15 that the Memorandum and Separation Agreement are the sole documents governing the 16 parties' agreement would render the terms "in accordance with the Company's Severance 17 Pay Plan" and as "provided in the Plan" superfluous. Such an interpretation is disfavored 18 under Washington law. Kut Suen Lui v. Essex Ins. Co., 375 P.3d 596, 602 (Wash. 2016) 19 (finding a party's contract interpretation "unreasonable because it ignores the plain

20
21 ⁷ Although the Tohono court interprets Arizona law, the court concludes that Washington 22 law is the same. See In re Mastro, 2011 WL 3300140, at *5 (citing Hearst Commc'ns, 115 P.3d at 270 & n.14) (stating that under Washington law extrinsic evidence may not be considered if the contract terms are not susceptible to the meaning the evidence would ascribe to it).

4 which renders some of the language meaningless or ineffective."); Seattle-First Nat'l 5 Bank v. Westlake Park Assocs., 711 P.2d 361, 364 (Wash. Ct. App. 1985) (same).
6 Accordingly, the court rejects the Oliver's proffered interpretation and denies their 7 motion to reconsider its September 12, 2016, ruling.⁸

8 B. The Parties' Cross Motions for Summary Judgment

9 Alcoa moves for summary judgment that (1) the terms "the Company's Severance 10 Pay Plan" or the "Plan," contained within the Memorandum and Separation Agreement, 11 refer to and incorporate the ISP into the parties' contract, and (2) the ISP, in turn, bars 12 Mr. Oliver's claim for $80,292.00 in severance pay when Alcoa ultimately did not sever 13 his employment. (See generally Alcoa Mot.) The Oliver's, on the other hand, ask the 14 court to rule on summary judgment that the terms "the Company Severance Pay Plan and

17 ⁸ The Oliver's also assert that Alcoa hid the ISP from Mr. Oliver. (Oliver Mot. at 12.)
18 There is no dispute that a copy of the ISP was not physically attached to the Memorandum and 19 Separation Agreement that Mr. Oliver executed, that Ms. Hughes told Mr. Oliver that he had all 20 the information he needed to evaluate the agreement, and that neither Ms. Hughes nor Mr.
21 Furnas personally provided a copy of the ISP to Mr. Oliver. (See Hughes Dep. at 54:22-55:3, 22 59:7-20, 63:4-22; 3d Oliver Decl. ¶ 2; Furnas Dep. at 70:24-71:12.) Nevertheless, it is also undisputed that Alcoa sent an email to Mr. Oliver with a link to a copy of the ISP on the Internet and advised Mr. Oliver to retain a copy of the ISP for future reference. (Gilmore Decl. ¶¶ 3-5, Exs. A, B.) It is also undisputed that the terms of the Separation Agreement state that Mr. Oliver
"acknowledge[s] . . . receiv[ing] a summary of Plan provisions describing the eligibility requirements for benefits under the Plan" (FAC, Ex. A at 5.) Based on this evidence, no reasonable juror could conclude that Alcoa hid the ISP from Mr. Oliver.

1 the “Plan” refer not to a separate document, but to the Memorandum and Separation
2 Agreement themselves. (See Olivers Mot. at 7-11.)

3 1. Standards for Summary Judgment Involving Contract Interpretation

4 Summary judgment is appropriate if the evidence, when viewed in the light most 5 favorable to the non-moving party, demonstrates “that there is no genuine dispute as to 6 any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ.
7 P. 56(a); see Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986); Galen v. Cty. of L.A., 8 477 F.3d 652, 658 (9th Cir. 2007). The moving party bears the initial burden of showing 9 there is no genuine issue of material fact and that he or she is entitled to prevail as a 10 matter of law. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323. If the moving party meets his or her burden, 11 then the non-moving party “must make a showing sufficient to establish a genuine 12 dispute of material fact regarding the existence of the essential elements of his case that 13 he must prove at trial” in order to withstand summary judgment. Galen, 477 F.3d at 658.

14 The court is “required to view the facts and draw reasonable inferences in the light 15 most favorable to the [non-moving] party.” Scott v. Harris, 550 U.S. 372, 378 (2007).
16 Where cross motions are at issue, the court must “evaluate each motion separately, giving 17 the nonmoving party in each instance the benefit of all reasonable inferences.” ACLU of 18 Nev. v. City of Las Vegas, 466 F.3d 784, 790-91 (9th Cir. 2006) (citations omitted); see 19 also Friends of Columbia Gorge, Inc. v. Schafer, 624 F. Supp. 2d 1253, 1263 (D. Or.
20 2008).

21 Summary judgment as to contract interpretation is appropriate only when the 22 interpretation does not depend on the use of extrinsic evidence or when the court can 1 reasonably infer only one interpretation based on the extrinsic evidence. Go2Net, Inc., v.

2 C I Host, Inc., 60 P.3d 1245, 1251 (Wash. Ct. App. 2003); Ferrellgas, 7 P.3d at 866
3 (“When extrinsic evidence is used to interpret a contract, summary judgment is 4 appropriate only if one reasonable inference can be drawn from the extrinsic evidence.”).
5 However, as noted above, the court may not consider extrinsic evidence if the contract 6 language is not susceptible to the meaning the proffering party attempts to ascribe to it.
7 See In re Mastro, 2011 WL 3300140, at *5 (citing Hearst Commc’ns, 115 P.3d at 270 & 8 n.14).

9 2. The Oliver’s Summary Judgment Motion

10 The Oliver’s ask this court to rule on summary judgment that the terms “the 11 Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the “Plan” as used in the Memorandum and 12 Separation Agreement refer to the Memorandum and Separation Agreement. (Oliver’s 13 Mot. at 7.) The Memorandum states that Mr. Oliver “will receive severance pay in 14 accordance with the Company’s Severance Pay Plan.” (FAC Ex. A at 1.) The Separation 15 Agreement states that Mr. Oliver “desire[s] to receive the pay and benefits provided in 16 the Plan.” (Id. at 3; see also id. (referencing “the payments and benefits provided to [Mr.
17 Oliver] in the Plan”).)

18 The court has previously held—and in this order declined to reconsider its 19 ruling—that the terms “in accordance with” and “provided in” “clearly and 20 unequivocally” incorporate “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” or the “Plan” into the 21 contract between Alcoa and Mr. Oliver. (9/12/16 Order at 18); see supra § III.A.4. The 22 court based its prior ruling on Western Washington Corporation of Seventh-Day

1 Adventists v. Ferrellgas, Inc., 7 P.3d 861 (Wash. Ct. App. 2000), which held that the 2 doctrine of incorporation by reference allows parties to incorporate contractual terms by 3 reference to a separate agreement or document so long as the incorporation is “clear and 4 unequivocal.” Id. at 865. In Ferrellgas, the contract at issue stated that the work would 5 “be performed in accordance with the ‘Project Contract Documents’ or the ‘Contract 6 Documents.’” 7 P.3d at 865. The court held that this language “clearly and 7 unequivocally” incorporated the “Contract Project Documents” and the “Contract 8 Documents” into the parties’ contract. Id. Similarly, this court held that the use of the 9 terms “in accordance with the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and “provided in the 10 Plan” incorporated “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” or the “Plan” into the parties 11 agreement. (9/12/16 Order at 18.) The question now before the court is the meaning of 12 these terms.

13 The Olivers argue that the terms “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the 14 “Plan” actually do not refer to a separate, incorporated document, but rather refer back to 15 the Memorandum and Separation Agreement themselves. (See Oliver Mot. at 12-13.) In 16 so arguing, the Olivers rely on Ms. Hughes’s testimony that she told Mr. Oliver that “[a]ll 17 the information for the agreement is included” in the documents he received (Hughes 18 Dep. at 63:4-22; see also 3d Oliver Decl. ¶ 2 (“[Ms. Hughes] assured me that there was 19 nothing else to review and no other relevant documents”)), and Mr. Oliver’s 20 testimony that based on Ms. Hughes’s statements he believed that “‘the Company’s 21 Severance Pay Plan’ and ‘the Plan’ must be the legal terms for the documents he already 22 had” (3d Oliver Decl. ¶ 2; Oliver Dep. at 32:8-13).

1 The court, however, declines to consider this extrinsic evidence because the 2 Olivers offer it to vary or contradict the terms the Memorandum and Separation 3 Agreement or to show an intention that is at odds with the parties' written contract. See 4 William G. Hulbert, 245 P.3d at 784. As the court has held, the Memorandum and 5 Separation Agreement "clearly and unequivocally" incorporate a separate document, 6 which the Memorandum and Separation Agreement refer to as "the Company's 7 Severance Pay Plan" or the "Plan." (9/12/16 Order at 18.) The interpretation the Olivers 8 offer—that "the Company's Severance Pay Plan" or the "Plan" refer to the Memorandum 9 and Separation Agreement themselves—is not reasonable. The Olivers' proffered 10 interpretation would mean that the Memorandum and Separation Agreement incorporated 11 themselves by reference. This argument is just another attempt to disregard the 12 contractual language that unambiguously incorporates another document by reference.
13 The court declines to adopt so nonsensical an interpretation.⁹ The court, therefore, denies 14 the Olivers' motion for summary judgment.

15 3. Alcoa's Motion for Summary Judgment

16 Based on the court's prior ruling that the Memorandum and Separation Agreement 17 incorporate another document referred to as "the Company's Severance Pay Plan" or the 18 "Plan" (9/12/16 Order at 18), Alcoa now asks the court to enter summary judgment on

21 ⁹ Indeed, the court may not consider the Olivers' extrinsic evidence on this point because 22 the contract language is not reasonably susceptible to the meaning that the Olivers are attempting to ascribe to it. See In re Mastro, 2011 WL 3300140, at *5 (citing Hearst Commc'ns, 115 P.3d at 270 & n.14).

1 the meaning of those terms (see generally Alcoa Mot.). Specifically, Alcoa asks the 2 court to rule that these terms refer to the ISP and that the ISP bars Mr. Oliver from 3 receiving severance pay because Alcoa did not ultimately sever his employment.¹⁰ (See 4 id.)

5 Like the Olivers, Alcoa offers extrinsic evidence to support its position that the 6 terms “the Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the “Plan” in the Memorandum and 7 Separation Agreement refer to the ISP. (See Alcoa Resp. at 15.) First, Alcoa submits 8 testimony that the ISP is Alcoa’s only large-scale severance pay plan, and Alcoa uses the 9 ISP nationwide with few exceptions. (Hughes Decl. ¶ 10.) Further, Alcoa specifically 10 utilized the ISP to calculate Mr. Oliver’s anticipated $80,292.00 in severance pay as 11 stated in the Memorandum and Separation Agreement. (See Furnas Dep. at 59:13-25; 12 78:25-79:2 (“[The ISP is] the plan that is used to calculate what the employee gets, so it’s 13 kind of an integral part of this whole . . . process.”).) Indeed, the Olivers impliedly admit 14 that the “actual benefits calculation” contained in the Memorandum and Separation 15 Agreement is derived from the ISP and that Alcoa discussed the calculation with Mr.
16 Oliver. (See Olivers Mot. at 9 (“[N]one of the ISP’s terms (other than the actual benefits

18 19 ¹⁰ In its prior motion to dismiss the complaint, Alcoa also argued that the terms “the 20 Company’s Severance Pay Plan” and the “Plan” referred to the ISP. (MTD at 3.) In denying the 21 Olivers’ first motion for summary judgment, the court stated that it was constrained from 22 entering summary judgment on whether the ISP was incorporated into the Memorandum and Separation Agreement because Alcoa expressly asked the court not to convert its motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment and due to the early procedural posture of the case.
(9/12/16 Order at 25-26, n.10 (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d)).) These issues no longer impede the court’s decision. Alcoa seeks a ruling on summary judgment (see Alcoa Mot.), and discovery is now closed (see Sched. Order (Dkt. # 30) at 1).

1 calculation) were ever discussed with [Mr.] Oliver.”); see also Oliver Dep. at 2 22:19-23:11 (“[Mr. Furnas] went over what the possible package could include. . . .
3 Basically that I would receive, if I qualified, basically a year’s wages.”).) Finally, as 4 noted above, there is no dispute that Alcoa emailed a copy of the ISP to Mr. Oliver in 5 2012 and instructed him to retain a copy “for future reference.” (Gilmore Decl. ¶¶ 3-5, 6 Exs. A, B; Oliver Dep. at 53:20-24.)

7 The court’s previous order left open only one unresolved issue: the identity of 8 the document that the parties “clearly and unequivocally” incorporated by reference into 9 the Memorandum and Separation Agreement. (See 9/12/16 Order at 20 (“[T]he critical 10 issue in this case is the parties’ intention concerning the meaning of ‘the Company’s 11 Severance Pay Plan’ or the ‘Plan’ as those terms are used in the Memorandum and 12 Separation Agreement.”).) The court previously ruled that Alcoa’s proffered 13 interpretation of these terms as referring to the ISP was “a reasonable one.” (Id. at 23.) 14 The extrinsic evidence Alcoa relies upon reinforces the court’s prior conclusion. The 15 court has already found that the Oliver’s proffered interpretation of these terms as 16 referring to the Memorandum and Separation Agreement themselves is not reasonable 17 and that the contract’s language is not susceptible to the meaning the Olivers ascribe to it.
18 See supra §§ III.B.5, III.C.2. This conclusion leaves the court with only one 19 interpretation of the terms at issue—Alcoa’s interpretation—that can be reasonably 20 inferred from the extrinsic evidence that the court may consider on this motion.¹¹ See

21 22 ¹¹ As noted above, the court may not consider the Olivers’ proffered extrinsic evidence in deciding this motion because the contract language is not reasonably susceptible to the meaning

1 | Go2Net, Inc., 60 P.3d at 1250-51. Because the Olivers failed to offer any competing
2 | reasonable interpretation of the contract terms at issue, the Olivers have failed to 3 | demonstrate a genuine dispute of material fact necessary to defeat Alcoa's motion for 4 | summary judgment. Accordingly, the court grants Alcoa's motion that the terms "the 5 | Company's Severance Pay Plan" and the "Plan" as used in the Memorandum and
6 | Separation Agreement refer to the ISP.¹²

7 | As noted above, the ISP expressly states in numerous places that employees are 8 | eligible to receive severance payments only if Alcoa permanently severs their
9 | employment. (Furnas Decl. ¶¶ 3-4, Ex. A); see infra § II. There is no dispute that Alcoa
10 | did not sever Mr. Oliver's employment on March 31, 2016, and that he continued to work

11 | _____
12 | that the Olivers attempt to ascribe to it. See In re Mastro, 2011 WL 3300140, at *5 (citing
13 | Hearst Commc'ns, 115 P.3d at 270 & n.14). Thus, the court considers only the extrinsic
14 | evidence Alcoa has submitted on this issue.

15 | ¹² Despite the undisputed fact that Alcoa sent a copy of the ISP to Mr. Oliver in 2012 (see
16 | Gilmore Decl. ¶¶ 3-5, Exs. A-B; Oliver Dep. at 53:20-24), the Olivers continue to assert that 17 | Alcoa concealed the ISP from Mr. Oliver when he executed the Memorandum and Separation
18 | Agreement in 2015 and that Alcoa's agent made "misleading statements . . . upon which Mr.
19 | Oliver relied." (Oliver Resp. at 9.) The Olivers, however, do not explain how these allegations
20 | are relevant to their claims. As noted above, the Olivers cannot rely on extrinsic evidence to 21 | modify, vary, or contradict the terms of the contractual documents at issue. See supra § III.A;
22 | see also Go2Net, Inc., 60 P.3d at 1251. Further, all of the Olivers' claims are founded on breach of contract theories. (See FAC ¶¶ 3.1-3.3 (alleging that the Olivers are entitled to a declaratory judgment that the "Separation Agreement is a binding contract" and Mr. Oliver is entitled to "the severance amount agreed to between the parties"), ¶¶ 4.1-4.6 (alleging that "[t]he parties entered into an enforceable Separation Agreement" and that the Olivers "are entitled to specific performance of the . . . Separation Agreement by court decree"), ¶¶ 5.1-5.5 (alleging breach of contract), ¶¶ 6.1-6.5 (alleging willful withholding of wages in violation of RCW 49.52.050 for
"[f]ailure to pay the wages contractually agreed upon").) The Olivers have not asserted any claim based on an equitable theory or some form of misrepresentation or fraud (see generally id.), and Mr. Oliver testified that he has no other claims against Alcoa other than those contained in the complaint (Oliver Dep. at 54:19-22). Thus, Mr. Oliver's allegations about concealment of the ISP or reliance on Alcoa's statements are irrelevant to the Olivers' contractual claims and provide no basis for denying summary judgment to Alcoa.

1 at the Ferndale plant until he voluntarily retired on May 31, 2016. (Oliver Dep. at 44:7-8; 2 46:6-24; see 1st Oliver Decl. ¶¶ 10-12.) Accordingly, the court also grants Alcoa's
3 motion for summary judgment that Mr. Oliver is not entitled to a severance payment 4 from Alcoa because Alcoa did not permanently sever his employment.¹³

5 C. Alcoa's Motion for a Stay

6 On April 13, 2017, Alcoa filed a motion seeking a stay in the proceedings pending 7 the court's determination of the parties' dispositive motions. (See MTS.) The court has 8 now denied the Oliver's motion for reconsideration and for summary judgment and 9 granted Alcoa's motion for summary judgment in total. None of the Oliver's claims 10 survive this ruling. Accordingly, Alcoa's motion for a stay pending the court's is now 11 moot, and the court denies it.

12 IV. CONCLUSION

13 Based on the foregoing analysis, the court DENIES the Oliver's motion for 14 reconsideration and for summary judgment (Dkt. # 40), GRANTS Alcoa's motion for 15 summary judgment on all of the Oliver's claims (Dkt. # 32), and DENIES as moot 16 Alcoa's motion to stay the proceedings (Dkt # 47).
